Strategic Plan
7/1/2023 – 6/30/2028

Introduction to 2023 Strategic Plan

In 2019, the Virginia Outdoors Foundation's implemented a five-year strategic plan that has guided the organization's work since its inception. As the 2019-2023 strategic plan approached its sunset date, an update was necessary to address emerging opportunities and challenges.

This update builds on VOF's vision and goals using insightful input from Foundation staff and the Board of Trustees.

2019 Strategic Plan Achievements

The 2019 plan included five strategic goals supported by 14 objectives to be achieved through the implementation of 53 strategies.

- Strategies completed: 37 (69.8%)
- Strategies in progress as of the writing of this update to the plan: 10 (18.9%)
- Strategies re-evaluated for inclusion and/or revision in this update to the plan: 6 (11.3%)

Major focal points in the 2019 plan are revenue generation for general operations, risk management and due diligence. Due to the nature of VOF's work, you will find some symmetry in the draft plan with the 2019 plan; however, the draft plan contains refined goals and objectives to reflect achievements, next steps and changed circumstances.

2023 Plan

Major topics that emerged in the planning sessions were: 1) increased state/federal grant funding for acquisitions; 2) administrative remedies for easement compliance; 3) evolving law and policy on charitable gifts of easements (IRC 170(h)); 4) community-based conservation and 5) open-space land conversion for renewable energy development.

Increasing Revenue for Acquisitions. Significant investment in conservation through state and federal programs is available today. VOF should position itself to be a key player in leveraging grant funding for project acquisition in furtherance of the Commonwealth's land conservation goals to increase public access, water quality protection and resilience.

Creating Administrative Remedies for Easement Enforcement. Lawsuits can be unwieldy, expensive and unpredictable, and moreover, conservation easements have not fared well in Virginia's highest court. As such, VOF should seek out alternative paths for easement enforcement through linking easement compliance with preferential taxation under Virginia Code Section 10.1-1009.

Keeping Pace with Evolving Law and Policy on Charitable Gifts of Easements. Recent changes to the body of law around charitable gifts of easements have created uncertainty and increased due diligence costs for landowners. This, coupled with the reduced tax benefits associated with easement donation, has increased the burden on landowners when contemplating charitable gifts of easements. VOF should engage policy makers and stakeholders to seek out solutions to keep conservation easement donation a viable option for landowners. (Hanger Budget Item to review tax credit efficacy)

Community-Based Conservation. Expanding the reach and impact of land conservation to all Virginia citizens through partnership work and grant funding provides VOF an opportunity to cultivate a deep conservation ethic across the Commonwealth. A widely shared conservation ethic ensures that land conservation will remain a priority of policy makers, budget writers, taxpayers and citizens. Eighty percent of Virginians live in a town, city or urbanizing county and a community-based conservation approach must include engagement with that 80% to understand their needs and open pathways for dialogue on the importance of open-space conservation for healthy communities, both rural and urban.

Renewable Energy Development. Transitioning to renewable energy will require millions of acres to be enrolled in wind and solar generation. Major public investment and policy targets are increasing the pressure on undeveloped, open-space land and it is likely we will see major conversion of farms and forests in the near term. VOF should review its Energy/Infrastructure and Diversion/Conversion policies to ensure best practices, which review should include stakeholder engagement to better understand the state of renewable energy development and its potential impacts on land conservation.
